

S.N.A. . . . Who's Who

SHRI P. V. RAJMANAN

After a brilliant academic career—he secured 'firsts' in English and in Philosophy at the B.A. and the Jurisprudence prize at the B.L.—M. Rajamannar served as apprentice and later as junior under his father, Diwan Bahadur P. Venkataramana Rao, and grew up in an atmosphere rich in the tradition of culture and legal lore. He proved fully equal to all the exacting rigours of the profession of law, and in 1944, twenty years after his enrolment, he was appointed Advocate General in succession to Sir Alladi Krishnaswami Ayyar, appeared in some of the sensational trials and won golden opinions all round. In July 1945 he was appointed as a Judge of the Madras High Court and in January 1948, its Chief Justice.

He is keenly interested in music, dance, drama and fine arts and has been taking an active part in their development for nearly 30 years. He has extensively written and broadcast on music, drama and film. From 1922 to 1925, he edited a literary journal in Telugu named Kala. He secured in 1924 the Ramarayanimgar Prize with a Telugu work on "Representative Government in Ancient India." He has written a series of remarkable one-act plays which have won for him a considerable reputation and have been translated into Tamil, Hindi and other modern Indian languages. His wide knowledge of English, Sanskrit and Telugu and his passion for painting, music and their sister arts have given him intellect the embracing fluidity of imaginative comprehension, and have helped him to acquire the poise, the grace, the nuances of social deportment and the quiddities of human behaviour which have made him one of the most courteous as he is one of the most genial of men. He is the Chairman of the Sangeet Natak Akademi.

SHRI UDAY SHANKAR

Born in the picturesque and historic place of Udaipur, Uday Shankar spent most of his childhood in Ghazipur and Banaras. While a small boy he took interest in painting and his father got him admitted in the Royal College of Arts, London. He began to take training in the plastic art under the guidance of Sir William Rothenstein.

The famous Russian dancer, Anna Pavlova, snatched him away from the college of arts. After joining Pavlova's Ballet Company, he arranged two Hindu Ballets in which he was her partner, and subsequently, he accompanied her on a coast to coast tour of the United States. Returning to Europe he worked as a professional dancer in London and Paris. He made his company and toured round the world. In 1939 he opened a Culture Centre in Almorah, U. P. which had to be closed down during World War II. With a view to making his dynamic art permanent, he opened another channel and produced a film "KALPANA" which received the second place in the world's list of movies.
